THURSDAY, MAY 12.

Now CAGE the Canaries.

It will soon be the "queen recent" of Spain.

How foreign nations dislike to see a monarchy fall!

The Manila channel was loaded, but Dewey didn't "mine."

Spain is looking for a nation that will help her let go of the United States.

"Only a few men slightly wounded," was the most glorious part of Dewey's victory.

It is said that the Spanish government will send out no more war news on Manila paper.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN wants to fight against Spain. He might be utilized to bluff back at Weyer.

WONDER if those women in Boston who wear red, white and blue garters are making an ostentatious display of their patriotism?

If Weyer "drops into the United States" as he proposes, he will furnish another pitiable example of a man taking a drop too much.

EUROPE has awakened to the realization that the United States has 70,000,000 people and boundless resources. Verily, universal peace is dawning.

SPAIN is a howling success in the breeding line. She hasn't done a thing but "breed" riots since this for her unhappy war started.

THE most commendable thing about Great Britain is the promptitude with which she redresses wrongs inflicted against her subjects by foreign foes.

SEÑOR MORET, speaking before the Spanish cortes on Friday, remarked of the Spanish people: "We are a degenerate race." Rather tough that on Spain.

PERHAPS the greatest compliment to the United States is the reference of foreign newspapers to bullism. It they will not respect this country, they must fear it, that's logic.

THE queen recent says, "All Europe is in sympathy with Spain." However, the foreign powers have concluded that they are not so all-fired powerfully anxious to show this great sympathy just now.

In addition to establishing a great and prosperous trade, the acquisition of the Philippine Islands would give us a few more offices to fill and that, in these fool civil service days, is no small consideration.

It is becoming very evident that this country will have to adopt a new foreign policy for the future. It seems that there is a widespread sentiment that Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands are necessary for the extension and safety of Uncle Sam's commerce and merchant marine.

THE New York swells, who enlisted in the 1st regiment of U. S. volunteer cavalry, had to leave their valets at home. They are probably nice fellows and all that, but it must be remembered that every man sent by New Mexico as a member of that regiment is just as good as the best New York swell. The chances are that all will fraternize and assimilate when it comes to duty and active service, and that this mixture will prove for the best and will make the regiment one of the finest in the service.

THE president, on yesterday, named Charles A. Leland, of Ohio, to be associate justice of the Territorial Supreme court to succeed Judge H. B. Hamilton, of the fifth judicial district. There is very little known of the new appointee out here, except that he is a lawyer of fine legal attainments and sterling character and personally well known to the president. Of Judge Hamilton, the New Mexican, always fair to a political opponent, takes pleasure in saying, that he will leave the high office which he has held for four years with the respect and good will of the people of the territory, having performed the duties of the office diligently and efficiently and presided over the courts of the fourth district with dignity, fairness and ability.

Looking Backward.

Sagasta says concerning the action of congress and the president in regard to Spain: "It is an insult the most infamous on record." And the Saturday Review of London, Eng., adds:

"Spain, proposing to wipe out that insult with blood, without the slightest hesitation, takes up the big bully's gauntlet. Sixteen millions of people and a low treasury against 70,000,000 with boundless resources—that is how the matter stands. And it would seem in the case that we English, who are generally on the side of the little 'un' in a stand-up fight, are on the side of the big 'un'—on the side, so to speak, of the big cad in his fight with the little gentleman."

Happily the Review does not voice the sentiments of the English people. However, the whole matter is reported back to King George III, wherever his majesty may be sojourning just now. If he remembers anything, he will doubtless recollect an incident where a big, blustering bully jumped onto a little gentleman and got a knock-out blow in the solar plexus about 120 years ago.

Trying to Be Funny.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that Santa Fe is about as inaccessible a point as exists in New Mexico, nothing would do but the troops must rendezvous there. This confirms the suspicion that when the word comes to an end, the Santa Fe politicians will demand that the fireworks display begin at that point.—Silver City Independent.

Our esteemed contemporary endeavors to be funny. The fact remains that in Santa Fe the organization of the four troops of volunteers, New Mexico's quota, was successfully accomplished in five days. The fact remains, as fully proven by the result, that it was best to select Santa Fe as the rendezvous and central point for mustering, because it has the best railroad connections with every section of New Mexico, because it is the seat of the territorial government and because it was best and most advisable, that the New Mexico volunteers should be selected and enlisted under the personal and direct supervision of the governor of the territory, the official charged by law with that duty. In addition, on account of its fortunate location and advantages the organization of the volunteers, was accomplished here cheaper and more speedily than it could have possibly been done elsewhere.

Hasten the Capture of Havana.

So far as the residents of Havana are concerned, it is to be hoped that city will be taken immediately. The blockade of the port by the American fleet has only been in force a short time, and yet the condition of the people there is reported as pitiable. Only the very rich are able to buy food, the reconcentrados have been turned into the streets to starve, while the tons of food sent for their relief from this country, have been stolen by the military authorities to feed the soldiers. General Blanco has appealed to Spain for supplies which, if they should be sent, can never be landed, and it would be a merciful act for the United States to take possession at once.

Added to the horrors of starvation, is the situation as controlled by the military authorities. It has been openly announced that the moment the first American shot is fired at the fortifications, the volunteers in the Spanish army will begin a massacre of all Cuban sympathizers and those suspected of harboring any friendliness for freedom. There is but one way to conduct war against a savagery of the kind which exists among the Spanish soldiery, as described by the refugees from Cuba, and that is make short and decisive work of the matter. The transportation of troops from the United States is carried on as rapidly as preparations will permit, and the moment a sufficient number has been landed to successfully co-operate with the insurgents, the long desired expulsion or subjugation of the Spaniards on the island should begin, and not one moment lost until this course of oppression and rapine has been obliterated from the new world.

The Financial Situation.

The banks of the country have adjusted themselves to a war basis without any serious difficulty and without a single failure. Loans and deposits are increasing and the money drain has ceased. The only noticeable feature in financial matters is an advance in rates, which is a legitimate banking prerogative in such times. The reserves were strengthened and all demands of customers promptly met during what promised to be a small panic and now the banks are accommodating the public again and will continue to do so without any regard for war news, unless congress tampers with the money question. However, the stable and sound policy of the administration is not conducive to fears on the subject.

New York bankers were drawn on heavily and the money distributed throughout the interior, which had a tendency to create an easy condition in the money market and now local institutions have more ready currency for local needs than they had prior to the war.

The statement of the associated banks of New York last Saturday, show that between the blowing up of the battleship Maine, February 15, and April 30, $80,180,500 in deposits had been withdrawn from the associated banks, while loans had decreased $99,638,300.

Friday of last week condition seemed completely restored again and loans and deposits increased. The gains Saturday were $887,100 in loans and $1,173,600 in deposits for the associated banks of New York.

No other country in the world could adjust itself so completely and quickly to a financial footing during war times.

THE GOLDEN COCHITI.

A Customs Mill to Be Erected at Bland—General Activity Prevails—Minor Mining Notes.

Special Correspondence to the New Mexican. Bland, May 9.—The probabilities of a custom mill at Bland are above par. Charles Van Law, of Colorado, visited the district last week for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of available ore for a mill. He seemed perfectly satisfied with his investigation and stated that there was no doubt but what the Cochiti & Improvement company, composed of Colorado and New York capitalists would be organized at once for the purpose of constructing a 300-ton plant at Allerton. A reservoir will be constructed in Pino canon and will be supplied with spring water, and two reservoirs will be put in Cochiti canon. The supply of ore for the mill will be partially derived from general resources but the company will depend on the iron King mine for considerable, as that property will be worked by the company in conjunction with the mill. General mining activity prevails as usual and a great many transfers of property are taking place. The machine which will be used in riveting the steel frame and sheeting of the Allerton mill building will be running next week.

THE CANNON CRACKER.

And How It Caused the Bachelor to Change His Boarding Place.

"In the long run," said the bachelor lawyer, "a man is sure to get paid up for keeping bad company. During the holidays I staid late down town several nights, just to see what was going on, and one night this week I indulged the same reprehensible curiosity. As I started home between 1 and 2 o'clock I was joined by a clever old German gentleman who had been more bibulous than the law allowed. We left the street car and were jogging peacefully along the two squares we had to walk when suddenly he launched out, in broken English, into a long and fiery tirade against my landlady. He was in the grocery business and she had, so he thought, once dealt unfairly by him.

"I let him bubble on, without argument, but as we neared my boarding house he took a giant firecracker from his overcoat pocket and announced that he had bought it to throw at her window in slight expression of his unfriendly feeling for her. All effort to dissuade him was futile, but I finally prevailed on him to promise that he would not light it and throw it until I was safely in the house. To this he agreed, and I hastened up the steps and applied my latchkey to the door.

"Whether I was nervous or slow or he was faithless to his vow I could never determine, but just as I had got the door open and had stepped inside when came the big cracker over my head into the hall, exploding with a diabolic, deafening noise just as I closed the door behind me. Of course the whole house turned out in their night clothes, landlady and all, before I could escape up the stairs, and it was useless for me to attempt any explanations, for not a soul believed me. Everybody was convinced that I was inebriated and previous good conduct didn't count in my favor at all. I, and no other person, had fired that awful cracker in the hall, intending, no doubt, to burn them all in their beds. I hunted another boarding house in a few days, and as for that lying old scoundrel, when I next saw him I couldn't even make him remember that he had seen me inside of six weeks."—Detroit Free Press.
